

Just my short & rambling say on Population Strategy and modern western societies need for constant & endless growth: when is enough, enough? When every bit of land is occupied by a house or business or otherwise exploited? And once your target of 650,000 is reached by 2050, what then? A new target of a million? When is enough, enough?

cheers,
Andrew Heard